Offices of the Wilson Institute

Welcome to the University of Regina, with three federated colleges: The First Nations University of Canada, Champion College and Luther College. The main campus of the University of Regina is situated on Treaty 4 lands.

These are the territories of the nêhiyawak, Anihšînāpêk, and Dakota, Lakota, and Nakoda, and the homeland of the Métis. Today, these lands continue to be the shared territory of many diverse peoples from near and far. The nêhiyawak originally referred to Regina as oskana kâ-asastêki which literally means “The place where bones are piled up.” This is why Regina’s nickname is “Pile O’Bones” and this is the origin of the name of our current location in Wascana Park.

Bienvenue à l’Université de Regina, qui compte trois collèges fédérés : la First Nations University of Canada, le Collège Champion et le Collège Luther. Le campus principal de l’Université de Regina se trouve sur le territoire du Traité no 4, soit sur les terres des Nêhiyawaks, des Anihšînāpêks, des Dakotas, des Lakotas et des Nakodas, et sur la terre ancestrale des Métis. Aujourd’hui, ce territoire demeure partagé par de nombreux peuples d’ici et d’ailleurs. À l’origine, les Nêhiyawaks appelaient Regina « oskana kâ-asastêki », ce qui veut littéralement dire « l’endroit où les os s’amoncellent ». C’est pourquoi Regina est parfois surnommée « Pile O’Bones » (le tas d’os) en anglais. C’est aussi l’origine de « Wascana », le nom du lieu où nous nous trouvons actuellement.

Welcome to the University of Regina!

We were thrilled by the response to this year's call for papers, "Gathering Diversities." The papers explore diversities in historical inquiries, including different temporal, geographical, and methodological approaches, that are central to cultivating new perspectives and insights in the discipline. I owe many thanks to the members of the Program Committee and Local Area Committee for their assistance in creating an exciting program that highlights the latest scholarship in the field.

Bienvenue à l'Université de Regina!

Nous avons été ravis de la réponse à l'appel de communication « Diversités convergentes » de cette année. Les communications explorent les diversités dans la recherche historique, y compris les différentes approches temporelles, géographiques et méthodologiques qui sont essentielles pour cultiver de nouvelles perspectives et connaissances dans la discipline. Je tiens à remercier les membres du comité du programme et du comité local pour leur aide dans la création d'un programme passionnant qui met en lumière les dernières recherches dans le domaine de l'histoire.

A Political Biography

Myron Momryk

How did a son of Ukrainian immigrants rise through the Canadian political system and reach the position of a cabinet minister?

How did the ethnocultural communities contribute to Starr's political success?

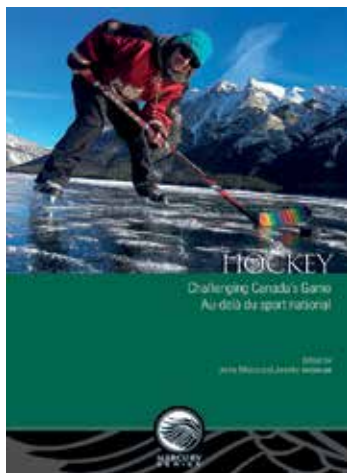

This study examines Mike Starr's career in an attempt to answer some of these questions.

Hockey Challenging Canada's Game Au-delà du sport national

Edited by Jenny Ellison and Jennifer Anderson

For Canadians, hockey is the game.

This interdisciplinary book considers hockey, both as professional and amateur sport, and both in historical and contemporary context, in relation to larger themes in Canadian Studies, including gender, race/ethnicity, ability, sexuality and geography.

UBC's History faculty ask thought-provoking questions about our collective and diverse past. We research global migration, media technologies, the history of emotions, the diffusion of religious cultures, and the many forms of colonialism. We study histories of legal systems, urban planning, global health, sexual identities, and parenting. We teach courses on the history of human rights, the environment, international relations, medicine and health, Indigenous-settler interactions, ideological extremism, and the relationship of global and regional histories in Africa, the Americas, Asia, Europe, and Canada.

We look forward to welcoming you for the 2019 Annual Meeting of the Canadian Historical Association!

The Lost Stories Project collects little-known stories about Canada's past, gives them to artists to create works of public art, and documents the artist's creative process through film. With Canada 150 support, the Project has produced four short films documenting stories from across Canada and the artists interpreting them. This "festival" will include film screenings and Q&A. Refreshments will follow.

Le projet Histoires retrouvées recueille des récits peu connus de l'histoire du Canada avant de les donner à des artistes qui conçoivent des œuvres d'art public qui documentent le processus créatif de l'artiste par l'entremise de films. Grâce à l'appui de Canada 150, le projet a produit quatre courts métrages qui relatent des récits de partout au pays et qui documentent les artistes qui ont interprété ces histoires. Ce « festival » comporte des visionnements de films et une séance de questions-réponses. Des rafraichissements seront servis par la suite.

HANDS ON HISTORY AT CARLETON

Our students make history, they don't just read it

Essays are only one way to explore the past. Students at Carleton construct immersive digital projects, write scripts, curate exhibits, conduct oral history interviews and create documentaries. They also write and publish innovative historical essays.

They engage with history in the real world through co-op and practicum opportunities for undergraduates, and paid internships for public history MA students. And where better to do this than the nation's capital?

Our students find employment in a wide variety of cultural institutions, and we now offer major as well as minor doctoral fields in public history.

In this session, several historians who work in government will discuss the issues involved with doing research that is not their own, including issues around classified or privileged research, how their research aligns (or doesn't align) with government priorities, how their research is communicated and used, and how they found their jobs beyond the academy.

Au cours de cette session, plusieurs historiens qui travaillent au gouvernement discuteront des questions liées à la recherche qui ne leur appartient pas, notamment les recherches confidentielles ou privilégiées, comment leur recherche s'harmonise (ou non) avec les priorités gouvernementales, de quelle façon elle est communiquée et utilisée et comment ils perçoivent leur travail à l'extérieur du milieu universitaire.

The Tri-University Graduate Program in History combines the faculty and resources of three of Canada's premier universities. With over 70 graduate faculty in the program, we are able to provide courses and supervise research across the widest possible range of areas. At the same time, through small seminars, close student-professor relationships, and teaching assistantships and scholarships held at one of our three participating campuses, we provide the atmosphere and collegiality of a smaller, more intimate program.

Our PhD program focusses on nine major fields: Canadian History, Cold War History, Early Modern European History, Indigenous History of Turtle Island, Modern European History, Medieval History, Scottish History, World History, and War and Society. Our Faculty's wide-ranging interests for research and graduate teaching at both the PhD and MA levels include the Atlantic world, crime, culture and entertainment, family and youth, gender and sexuality, health and nutrition, imperialism, Indigenous history, military history, politics and international relations, religious history, rural history, urban history, the history of science and the environment, and the history of tourism.

PhD Program

Each year we accept up to 20 new doctoral students. All eligible students receive substantial multi-year financial support, are provided with teaching assistantship opportunities, and are offered a course of their own to teach in a mentored setting. Our students generally move through their comprehensive fields one year, and so devote the majority of their studies to their own research, teaching, and writing. Program milestones (involving the writing and defence of both a thesis proposal and a completed chapter of the thesis) provide some of the most active support for students in any doctoral program. And first-year field seminars, extensive teaching opportunities, professional development courses, and the annual Tri-University History Conference provide superlative preparation for the non-academic and academic job markets alike, as demonstrated by the post-degree success of our graduates.

MA Program

In our flexible program, usually completed in 12 months, students complete their degrees through a combination of courses and a major research paper or thesis, or through coursework alone. With 24 MA seminars offered for 2018-19, we provide one of the most extensive ranges of exclusively MA-level courses in the country. All students have equal access to these courses and to the program's over 70 faculty members for service on their committees, and all eligible students in the program receive guaranteed financial support in the form of teaching assistantships and scholarships. The program's rigorous reading and research seminars, and capstone major research paper and thesis projects, have provided recent graduates with an ideal training for their current work in careers in finance, the tech sector, information science, teaching, and public administration, and in doctoral programs in History around the world.

For a comprehensive list of our faculty, areas, and courses, please visit our website (www.triuhistory.ca), for additional information please contact our director, Adam Creer (acrerar@wlu.ca).
